Audit finds public sector credit card policies are in place but improvements are needed

The Auditor General's latest Controls over Purchasing Cards report has tabled in Parliament today.

The audit of State government entities indicated a general improvement in controls compared to the Auditor General's last report on this topic in 2017.

'Entities still need to improve their policies, the monitoring of purchasing card use, and better manage transaction limits,' Ms Spencer said.

The audit report contains recommendations and better practice guidance to assist all public sector entities, including those not audited, to improve their purchasing card policies.
